

Emery Hartley
Friday 8 August 2014
5:00pm Telus 150

Reception to follow

Place Based Environmentalism in a Globalized Society:

The Friends of Clayoquot Sound into the Twenty-first Century

As a Friends of Clayoquot Sound (FOCS) activist, Emery Hartley designs campaigns to effect political change, teaches non-violent direct action, works on public awareness and engagement, and acts as a voice for the wild in many community initiatives. He has been heavily involved in liaising with local government, citizen, and First Nations communities on Canada's West Coast. His talk will reflect upon the obstacles which local and small-scale environmentalist organizations must overcome in order to achieve their objectives and remain relevant to society.

For more information contact jon.clapperton@ualberta.ca